From an early age Stanley Winkle was viewed by society as abnormal, an outcast of sorts. At thirteen he was diagnosed with paranoid schizophrenia. He never expected to be embraced as a pillar of the community, but the stigma of being institutionalized followed him around like a mangy dog. Unable to flee the stain of mental illness, Stanley throws himself in front of a train. In the final moments prior to death, something or someone divinely intervenes and death is thwarted. After being locked away in Brigham Mental Institution, a mysterious man offers to help Stanley dig deeper into the past.
